AviTools enables you to record screen activity, capture screenshots and make videos from BMP images.

AVI Recorder enables you to capture the whole screen, active window or fixed rectangle. It's possible to configure the frame time (in milliseconds) for both recording and playback, set the background color, include or exclude the cursor, as well as to indicate the output directory and file name of the new captured AVI clip. AVI Builder enables you to get started by populating the task list with the images you want to transform. Just keep in mind that BMP is the only supported photo file type. It's possible to add as many images as you want and to specify the output directory and file name of the new AVI video. Main Features:

- Batch processing: you can save all captured AVI files to a folder in one step
- Audio capture: capture the audio with microphones and record

voice using the headset

Background color: you can set a background color for the whole recording or use a fixed color for the capture frame

Cursor: you can include or exclude the cursor

Frame Time: you can set the frame time (in milliseconds)

for both recording and playback

Output directory and file name: you can select the output directory and file name for your AVI clip

Photo capture: you can add a collection of images from your hard drive or Internet

Video duration: you can choose the duration of the AVI clip Video options: you can configure video settings like video frame rate, width and height, bitmap type, background color, and many more Transition: you can add transition effects to the video clip
Video player: you can launch the generated AVI video clip in the default media player
AVI Builder
AVI Recorder A: If you're just looking for a simple screenshot utility, I can recommend Shutter. It's super simple to use, but you can record and save to GIF or BMP. Once it's saved, you can play it back in the default media player or transfer it to your desktop as an image.

You can set it to capture a specific area of the screen, which is a useful trick for animating flash pages.
