The present invention relates to a device for cutting and flattening sewing threads of a pile fabric with the device forming part of a machine for the manufacture of pile fabric, including a sewing head provided with a pair of needle clamping members for clamping and holding the fabric in a hole extending through a base plate, a shaft for rotation about an axis of symmetry and means for actuating the clamping members, a pair of electric motors each provided with a plurality of independently driven shafts, a cutter wheel rotatable about an axis and having an edge for machining the outer faces of the thread loops, a hammer means connected to at least one of the electric motors and a pair of beating rollers arranged on the same horizontal plane as the sewing head. A device of this type is described in German Patent No. DE-A-33 46 276. Antigenic determinants of rat IgM, IgA and serum transferrin. Rat and mouse antisera were raised to bromelain-gelatin (Br-G) and bromelain-trichloroacetic acid (Br-T). Rat sera (but not mouse) reacted with IgM, but not IgA, from Br-G-treated rats, indicating that two antigenic determinants were present on the gamma heavy chain. Sera to Br-T reacted with IgM and serum transferrin, but not IgA, indicating that a single antigenic determinant was present on the serum transferrin molecule. These results show that rat IgM and serum transferrin share a common beta 2-microgl
