Kidsmart Kidsmart, formerly Skyzone Ltd, is a distributor and manufacturer of GPS tracking devices for children and young people. The company designs and builds GPS tracking devices and outdoor locator systems, designed to monitor or locate a person, animal or vehicle. Their products include wearable GPS tracking devices which can be worn by the individual or be clipped onto a tag worn by the individual. Kidsmart claim their products are designed to appeal to kids, are less likely to be lost than traditional GPS trackers, and don't look like a traditional security system. History Kidsmart was founded in 1998 by Ciaran Gormley, Brendan Gormley, and Martin Wright in Liverpool, England, as Skyzone Ltd. The business was initially focused on GPS-linked radio transmitters designed to be worn by children. In 2005, the company expanded into the production of tracking devices for dogs. The company acquired European distributor T11 in 2008, and took on its management team in November 2009.

The company's then-new T2H GPS Tracker for Kids came to market in 2010, followed by the T3 GPS Tracker, with GPS tracking and tracking system compatible with the back-up 911 service. In 2011 the company acquired mobile phone SIMs provider Mobi3G. The company's sales doubled in 2012, to over £3 million. Kidsmart launched the Crazy Dog Tracker product line in 2012. The company's T6 GPS Trackers for Kids were made available in 2013, as were the Crazy Dog Scratch Pad and Kidsmart Hotline, a mobile phone tracking device that was designed for emergency use. In 2015 the company expanded into

Australia, and in August the same year it expanded into the United States, taking over the distribution of 10 Second GPS Trackers. Kidsmart's products were used in the 2018 James Bond film, Spectre. The company's T4 Kids Smartwatch was made available in late 2017. Products Kidsmart manufacture and sell GPS tracking devices for children, including trackers designed to be worn by the individual; trackers to be clipped onto clothing or tags worn by the individual; and portable GPS tracking devices for people in vehicles. The company also produces SIM cards designed for use with GPS devices, and GPS tracking and tracking systems. Kidsmart's products include: Trackers for individuals: Kidsmart T1 GPS Tracker for Kids - available in 10 colours, including camouflage
